

STATE KIWANIS MEET HERE TODAY

Attendance of 1,000 Expected; International President To Be Here.

Georgia Kiwanians will open their annual state convention here today at the Ansley hotel with advance indications that attendance will exceed 1,000 during the three-day meeting ending Saturday. Registration of delegates in the Ansley hotel lobby will begin early this morning and the day's program will include a golf tournament at East Lake Country Club this afternoon and a meeting of the Kiwanis board of district trustees, followed by dancing, in the Ansley ballroom at 7 o'clock this evening.

Heading the arriving delegates will be Joshua L. Johns, of Appleton, Wis., international president, and J. A. Frohock, of Bradenton, Fla., chairman of the Kiwanis International committee on agricultural affairs, who will address the convention on Friday morning and Saturday morning, respectively. Both will attend the dinner meeting of the Georgia district trustees this evening, at which the program for the coming year's activities will be considered. Dave M. Parker, Kiwanis district governor and assistant attorney-general of Georgia, will preside, and those attending will include Thomas O. Marshall, of Americus, immediate past governor; J. B. Harley, of Waycross, district secretary; C. C. Bunn, of Odeh, district treasurer; Lieutenant governors of the eight Kiwanis divisions in Georgia: Henry C. Heinz, of Atlanta, past international president, and Joseph C. Shaw, of Atlanta, chairman of the convention committee.

The golf tournament at East Lake will begin at 1 o'clock and players will be permitted to start as late as 2:30 o'clock. Play will be on the handicap basis and prizes will be awarded for low gross and low net scores and for players scoring the greatest number of pars and birdies. It was announced by Robert A. Clark, chairman of the golf committee. Special arrangements for golfers to play at other courses during the convention period have been made, Mr. Clark said.

Speeches by Governor Talmadge, Mayor Key and International President Johns will feature the business sessions of the convention Friday on the Ansley hotel roof, while women visitors will be carried through a program of social activities beginning with a style show at Davison-Paxon Company's tea room at 10 o'clock Friday morning, followed by a visit to Hillside Cottages, and a luncheon and bridge party at the Piedmont Driving Club. The entertainment program will reach its climax in a dinner-dance and cabaret at the Shrine mosque Friday evening. Business sessions Saturday morning on the Ansley roof, after which a large number of the convention visitors will attend the Georgia Tech-Tulane football game, will bring the convention to a conclusion.

Mr. Johns will be met on his arrival this morning at the Union station by a delegation of Kiwanis leaders headed by Mr. Heinz, at whose home Mr. and Mrs. Johns will be entertained during their visit to Atlanta. Mr. Johns is a leading attorney in Wisconsin, a banker and the head of a number of industrial enterprises. A graduate of Yale University and of the University of Chattanooga, Mr. Johns acquired a familiarity with southern conditions when he practiced law for several years in the Tennessee city and occupied a professorship at the University of Chattanooga. After returning to his native state, he gained prominence in public affairs as well as in business and served during 1928 and 1929 as chief adviser and private secretary to Governor Zimmerman, of Wisconsin. He is also a writer on economic and governmental matters and his articles have appeared in a number of magazines.

Mr. Frohock, who will drive through from Florida arriving here this afternoon with Mrs. Frohock, has played an active part in the development of diversified farming in the south. Believing that the solution of the agricultural problem lies in self-help rather than government aid, Mr. Frohock has been a leader in encouraging the growth of food and feed crops by farmers, in place of the old system of concentrating on a single money crop. Mr. Frohock is a practical farmer and dairyman and was one of the organizers of the Florida Guernsey Breeders' Association.

(Team-of-Four.)
Miss Ruth Burroughs and Bill Deas, 91.
Miss Evelyn Fain and Mrs. Deas, 85.
Mrs. Joe Rosenfield and Whitner Cary, 80.

MRS. ANNIE ADAMS FOSTER'S.
(Afternoon.)
Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and Ware Holliday, 70.
Mrs. J. B. Harley and Mrs. J. V. Green, 67.
Mrs. A. P. Calhoun and Mrs. Nina Cochran, 67.

The hour was 2 a. m. John Tyner, bridge expert and one of the most popular players who ever failed to return a partner's suit, was walking briskly out Peachtree. His pockets were light, as are most bridge players, and his heart was in the same condition. For was it not that very evening that the great light had filtered through John's mind and he had discarded Sims and announced his definite return to Culbertson.

His thoughts were on his past sins and how he had strayed from the path of sound bidding and the father of Peachtree he went the more he rejoiced in his great redemption. As he reached the neighborhood of Fifteenth street his vision of future bridge winnings under the Culbertson banner were rosy. His chain of thought, where future wealth played the leading role, was rudely broken as a husky voice from the darkness of some trees cried out, "Stick them up and be quick about it."

John stuck them up, but at the same time emitted a raucous laugh. The idea of any stick-up man holding a Sims player at that time of night and expecting to find any coin on him struck John as so funny that he laughed some more. The more he laughed the more puzzled the stick-up man became. Finally he asked John the cause of his merriment.

"Why, brother," replied John, "the idea of you sticking up a bridge player and especially a Sims player and expecting to find cash on him just sort of struck me as funny." There was plenty of talk but the conclusion was very simple. "But," added John, "I feel like unto a sinner who has at last seen the error of his ways and has been converted to a righteous cause. At such times," continued Mr. Tyner, "I understand that the conversion works one into a very generous mood."

The generous Tyner informed his guest that as up until that evening he had been a Sims player there was little cause to expect that he had anything in the money line. "But," added John, "I feel like unto a sinner who has at last seen the error of his ways and has been converted to a righteous cause. At such times," continued Mr. Tyner, "I understand that the conversion works one into a very generous mood."

With the last remark, Mr. Tyner went over to the closet and handed the man a very fine shirt and a fairly good looking overcoat. "Take these, my friend," said John, "and when the cold winter comes think of a reformed Sims player who is now feasting in the land of plenty."

The outstretched hands gathered in the gift and with the same movement returned to John a handsome revolver. "Take this, my friend," said the stick-up man, "and remember me by it and if anyone wants to play Sims with you, you have the exit play." They parted good friends. The stick-up man with the memory of a good night's rest and an increase in sartorial adornment. John with the glow that comes after the doing of a generous deed.

Thus ends the true story of how John Tyner was held up and at the same time is the official announcement that he is no longer a Sims player.

Slams and Overalls.
It might be of interest to you to know that the team of Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and Bill Meador has had the most impressive record of late. Out of the last seven tournaments in

British Bidding Edict Misunderstood, U. S. Told
LONDON, Oct. 18.—(AP)—C. M. Fleming, Ely Culbertson's British representative, today expressed the opinion that a ruling by the Portland Club had not inhibited any particular contract bidding conventions.

The club merely answered a question of a bridge writer," he said. "His answer said nothing about the Culbertson four and five no trump or any other specific convention. Any inferences that the Culbertson conventions are illegal are those of the propounder of the question, Lieutenant Colonel Walter Buller, and not of the club. "Until the club issues a statement, if it does, there is not cause for thinking anything has been changed."

which this pair has played as partners they have won four, finished second twice and third once. That is a very fine record. Ed Nix reports that the Henry Grady Bridge Club is getting many out-of-town players. These players drop in for an evening of bridge and then go their way. All seem to enjoy the play and Ed's regular players are high in praise of the visitors.

I notice a change for the better in the way Atlanta tournaments are run. They seem to move faster and have fewer mix-ups than in the past. The players still rehash hands too much and the old tournaments start too late, but once they get under way they move briskly. Hardly ever see a tournament run past midnight. The Cavendish Club introduced a novel and popular feature at its team-of-four tournament. A captain was named for each team and these went into consultation. Lots were drawn for the order of choosing. If you had the first pick on the first round, you had the last pick on the second. The result was that the teams were fairly well balanced.

The Georgia Bridge Club held its initial team-of-four tournament for the season and the affair went off in good fashion. Mrs. C. E. Williamson was present and while her team did not win the tournament she did not equal her former record of winning only three boards out of 30. Pearl says people never will get over kidding her about that feat. If she was not a good player I would hesitate to rub the fact in. Better be careful how you kid poor bridge players about their game. But Pearl has won enough to stamp her as far above the average.

CLARK, HARD EXPLAIN VISITS TO TALMADGE

Former Grand Jury Foreman and Resigned Foreman Issue Statements.

Explanations of their visits to Governor Eugene Talmadge were given Wednesday in public statements issued by P. A. Clark, who resigned Tuesday as foreman of the Fulton grand jury, and Stratton Hard, former foreman of the grand jury, following news reports of a stormy session of the grand jury at which efforts to initiate a probe of Fulton county affairs were defeated.

Ex-foreman Clark said that he conferred with Governor Talmadge on a proposal to call in an outside solicitor general to investigate county affairs, and that he did not discuss the question of re-appointment of three Fulton-division judges of municipal court of Atlanta. Hard said that the only purpose of his visit to the governor was to present a resolution requesting an investigation of political and legislative activities of the municipal court.

Clark said that "considering that the foreman of the grand jury, I feel that it is only fair to myself to fully explain my position. I resigned rather than accept a responsibility for actions which were not in accordance with my judgment."

"Probe Should Be Made." From the court charges, Clark understood that it was the jury's duty to investigate county affairs, and he said, "it is my opinion that when suspicion is cast upon any of the officials of the county, there should be thorough investigation, that their offices may be cleared of such suspicion. Should the suspicion be well founded, it could readily appreciate that every possible obstacle would be placed in the way of an investigation. Therefore a very rigid investigation should be made of their affairs."

Clark said that while Fulton's public officials in general are "some of the finest men we have in our county," should some few of the officials, through selfish motives, cause acts to be done that are questioned by the public it "usually reflects on the entire body of officials," and that "therefore it becomes necessary that a thorough investigation be made of any such acts that the integrity of innocent officials may not be questioned."

Clark cited as his reason for asking appointment of an outside solicitor for a county investigation the belief that because the solicitor's office has contact with each grand jury for only a period of two months, while the contact with public officials is a matter of years, "it is therefore, in my opinion that it would be asking an inhuman task to require a public official to prosecute his friends."

Asked New Solicitor. Clark said that he has "absolutely no reason to question the integrity and honesty of our solicitor, and it was not my purpose in asking that a solicitor be appointed that such act should cast any reflection on him, but, on the contrary, I felt that in fairness to the citizens of Fulton county and to relieve our solicitor of any responsibility that an outside solicitor who would be free from any local influence, be immediately appointed and take charge of a full and exhaustive investigation of all grave matters that have been on general information publicly criticized."

Clark said he "did not choose to serve but was selected to serve as foreman of the grand jury." He added that he made it clear to the governor that he was expressing his own views and not those of the present grand jury. Hard said that his conference with the governor did not relate to matters which, according to the newspapers, were discussed with the governor by Clark.

"I have been in a situation similar to that in which Mr. Clark has been placed," Hard said. "I know the overwhelming odds lined up against an independent and courageous grand juror, earnestly trying to do his duty, and my personal opinion is that Mr. Clark did the proper thing in laying the problem before the chief executive of the state."

Fine Advertisements Entered In Ninth Week of Ad Contest

By JAY ORR, JR.
And still another group of splendid advertisements was entered Wednesday to be judged with the ninth week's entries in the $1,300 Ad-Writing Contest.

Again I must admit that ad writers are coming to be more and more proficient as the contest progresses. The judges will have an even greater task in judging the ads this week.

As there are only four more weeks in which to enter advertisements in the contest, start writing your ads now so as to have them ready to enter next week.

As several advertisements were entered on ordinary paper, I shall tell you again that the one rule you must comply with is—write your ads on official Ad-Writing paper which may be obtained at any of the co-operating stores without cost or obligation. After obtaining the official paper, write your ad and enter it in the contest next Wednesday at 137 Peachtree.

I. F. BOWDEN FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TODAY

The funeral of I. F. Bowden, 65, brother of Councilman J. E. Bowden, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Martha Brown Memorial Methodist church, of which he was sexton. The Rev. H. E. Emory and the Rev. C. V. Weathers will officiate and interment will be in the Sylvan cemetery.

Mr. Bowden died suddenly Tuesday night at his residence at 411 Flat Shoals avenue of a heart attack. Members of the E. A. Minors lodge, F. & A. M., of which he was a member, will have charge of the services. Members of other lodges in which he was active, the Fulton lodge, I. O. O. F., the East Atlanta chapter, O. E. S., and the Red Men, will attend the service. Harry G. Poole is in charge of the arrangements.

Archie. If there is any additional information you wish, you can obtain it by calling at Ad-Writing headquarters, where an expert ad man will consult with you. Don't let these 21 prizes get away from you. There will be $75 cash prizes awarded each week for four more weeks, so you have lots of time in which to win some of them. Prize winners for this week will be announced in next Sunday's Constitution and the first three prize-winning advertisements will be printed.

NICE PEOPLE

the language of laxatives

BABIES are babies the world over. Young parents can't raise children without passing through certain stages of care and worry that are really close to Nature. Intelligent people . . . nice people . . . realize that children must be educated concerning natural functions. They don't sidestep responsibility. They teach their children . . . in a nice way . . . the language of laxatives.

The first intelligent question about a laxative is "How does it work?" Does it work suddenly, violently? Or does it work smoothly and naturally? And now we want to ask you something. Can you think of anything more smooth and natural than the action of saliva when you chew your food? Then why not use a laxative in the same way, and teach the children as well?

Just go to the nearest drug store and ask for Feen-a-mint, the chewing laxative. You chew it like any minty chewing gum and the saliva helps to carry this laxative right into the intestinal tract, just as it helps to digest food. It's the most scientific way yet invented. No lump or mass to swallow! Just chew naturally and Feen-a-mint does the rest. Economical and pleasant. No increase in doses. No gripping. Non-habit-forming. No mean feeling afterward.

Prominent Speakers To Take Part In Political Science Sessions Here

An address by Professor Thomas H. Reed, of the University of Michigan, on the subject of "Constructive Economy and Local Government Reform," will feature the annual banquet of the Southern Political Science Association on Friday night, October 27, at the Piedmont hotel. The sixth annual session of the association begins Thursday afternoon, October 26, lasts through Saturday morning, October 28, and includes on the program a number of distinguished speakers on timely subjects.

Prominent men who will be on the program include W. A. Sutherland, general solicitor of the Tennessee Valley Authority; D. W. Knepper, of Mississippi State Women's College; Frank R. Everscott, of the University of Chattanooga; Floyd Riddick and Robert Rankin, of Duke University; Hubert Searcy, of Birmingham-Southern College; James E. Pate, of William and Mary College, and others.

The first afternoon session will be devoted to international relations, with Dr. Ruth L. Higgins, of the Woman's College of Alabama, presiding. Dr. R. H. Holliday, president of Cox College, will preside at a dinner at the Piedmont Thursday night when Ralph McGill, sports editor of The Constitution, who recently visited revolution-torn Cuba, discusses conditions in that country.

On the program for the first night session on international relations, are: Kenneth C. Frazer, of the University of North Carolina; E. G. Howe, of the University of Alabama; D. F. Fleming, of Vanderbilt University; R. H. McLean, of Emory University; Eessie C. Randall, of Hollins College, and Roberta Hodgson, of the University of Georgia.

Dean W. G. Jackson, of the University of North Carolina, will preside at a session Friday morning at which administrative reorganization in the south, and problems of municipal government will be discussed. Speakers include Irby Hudson, of Vanderbilt;

Merritt B. Pound, of Georgia; Otis Walker, of Duke, and Miss Florence Smith, of Ames Scott.

One of the most interesting topics of the Friday afternoon session will be the subject, "What Will the Supreme Court Do With the NIRA?" to be discussed by Ashley Sellers, of Emory. John B. Clark, of Mercer, will discuss the "Tennessee Valley Authority." At a luncheon Friday afternoon, B. B. Kendrick, of the Woman's College of North Carolina, will speak on the "Status of Research in the Social Sciences in the South."

A reception in honor of Professor Reed will be held Friday afternoon following the discussion program. Dr. H. J. Pearce Jr. of Brenau, will preside at the banquet Friday night. Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell, president of the association, will deliver an address on "Executive Government."

The closing session Saturday will include an address by W. T. Whitman, of Duke, and section meetings on various governmental subjects.

FALL TO STREET FATAL TO MRS. A. B. BARBER

Mrs. Arthur R. Barber, well-known resident of Decatur, died Wednesday morning of injuries received Sunday night in a fall. She resided at 307 Adams street.

Mrs. Barber slipped on the steps at the home of the Rev. J. S. Strickland, Methodist minister, who is her son's father-in-law. She fractured her skull on the pavement and was taken to a private hospital, where she died.

Last rites are to be held at 1:30 o'clock (eastern time) this afternoon at the First Baptist church of Mansfield, Ga., where she formerly resided. She will be buried in the Adams cemetery.

Surviving are her husband; her mother, Mrs. Betty Lunsford; three sons, Wm. Leo and Ralph Barber; three sisters, Mrs. Cary Cawley, Mrs. W. M. Mitcham and Mrs. Carl Harwell; two brothers, G. E. and R. S. Lunsford, and three grandchildren, Leo Barber Jr., W. L. Barber Jr. and Barbara Barber.

Youths Lose Dreams As War Drums Roll
Youth is a grand thing, isn't it? Happy days . . . happy times . . . day dreaming . . . dreams of going forward to make those dreams come true. You have felt that emotion haven't you?

There is nothing like it, is there? Remember the courage, faith and laughter that you had as you look back over your younger days? Suppose you were disillusioned and those dreams crashed . . . hard. You gave your youth to the country when war drums sounded. You would go over there and come back home and then start making those dreams come true.

You came back but the dreams didn't come true. Your youth was gone . . . part of your body was gone . . . part of your mind . . . your brain . . . your everything was gone. You were disabled . . . disabled in mind and body so badly that your Uncle Sam had to come to your rescue. Pretty disappointing and discouraging, wasn't it, after those glorious dreams and plans in youth?

You hadn't planned to ask Uncle Sam, had you? But what could you do . . . a cripple in mind and body was at the bottom of the list when jobs were handed out . . . and then, too, there was yourself and family to take care of . . . Some of you are still in pace with Youth . . . others have it for a memory . . .

RETAIL CODE ISSUE STILL IN DISPUTE

Price-Fixing Provision Is Stumbling Block in Way of Agreement.

By JAMES P. SELVAGE
WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(AP)—For four hours today key members of the Roosevelt recovery units argued the controversial retail code with its dispute encrusted cost-plus provisions, but at the end they apparently were no nearer an agreement.

Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, said as he left the White House that final decision could not be reached "for a couple of days."

Still foremost in official discussion of the dispute which has brought two of the major recovery administrations into conflict was a belief that President Roosevelt would be compelled in the end to take his choice between the stands of Johnson and Secretary Wallace.

Mr. Roosevelt sat in during part of today's spirited give-and-take discussion, but finally left the debate to his lieutenants.

The situation revolves about the NRA provision—staunchly backed by Johnson and what he described as a top-heavy majority of the retail trade—that retailers be prohibited from selling at less than wholesale invoice cost plus ten per cent for labor costs, Secretary Wallace and George N. Peek, the farm administrator, and a long-time business associate of Johnson's contended this would play havoc with the buying power of farmers and consumers generally. They handle the wholesale and retail grocery business since farm products are involved, and struck out a cost-plus provision from those codes.

Johnson has argued that no merchant could make a profit by selling at cost plus ten per cent. He regarded the provision as one that would end "low leader" selling by some retailers under which some products are sold at a loss to attract customers who might be induced to purchase other merchandise.

WHY GET UP NIGHTS?

Physic the Bladder With Juniper Oil
Drive out the impurities and excess acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire. Juniper oil is pleasant to take in the form of BURETS, the bladder physic, also containing Gosh leaves, etc. Works on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box from any drug store. After four days if not relieved of "getting up nights" go back and get your money. If you are bothered with backache or leg pains caused from bladder disorders you will find relief after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. Jacobs Pharmacy says BURETS is a best seller.—(AP).

Exhaustive Review Is Issued On Federal Fund Limitations

Assistant General Counsel of Public Works Administration Outlines Steps in Overcoming Obstacles.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—While not intended as a specific ruling on the Georgia public works situation, the national public works administration today issued an exhaustive review of the problems of those states having difficulties in securing government loans because of constitutional limitations to borrowing power.

Officials here are still seeking to work out a scheme whereby most of the important projects proposed in Georgia may be approved and further conferences on the subject were held here today.

The review, nevertheless, has an interesting bearing on the general problem of states such as Georgia which have been unable to obtain loans out of the huge public works fund.

E. H. Foley Jr., assistant general counsel of the national public works administration, who made the survey, filed a report today with Administrator Harold L. Ickes in which he held that the national recovery act does not give the president blanket authority to override state constitutions.

Mr. Foley's report pointed out methods of obtaining relief but urging no action, reads as follows:

"The greatest obstacle with which the public works program has met is the restrictions and limitations placed upon states and municipalities by the provisions of state constitutions and state statutes. Where the restriction is constitutional it is of course necessary to go through the cumbersome process of constitutional amendment, a process which in most instances is equivalent to a denial of aid. In such situations we see once more the inevitable result that follows when fallible minds try to formulate an inflexible mold for the future. And in such a case the public works administration is helpless because the much-discussed section 203 (d) does not give the president blanket power to override state constitutions, nor does it authorize the public works administration to make loans on inadequate security or to make any grants in excess of 30 per cent of the cost of the labor and material on a given project.

"Where, however, restrictions are purely statutory, a forceful executive and legislature willing to co-operate can make the benefits of the act available to their constituents. There are several means available in such a case: First, it is desirable, where such a law does not already exist, to pass a revenue bond act. Under a revenue bond act the security in back of the bonds is the revenue from the particular project involved, which is thus made to pay its own way without any additional burden to the taxpayer.

Authorization for Borrowing.
"Another method is to authorize cities to borrow from the federal government without regard to any statutory debt limits and to dispense with the necessity of referendum elections, notice of hearings, and other time-consuming impediments, such as the requirement of public sale. The so-called Mendelbaum bill in New York, now constituting Chapter 752 of the laws of 1933, is an example of this type of legislation. This bill was enacted into law at the recent extraordinary session of the New York legislature. In certain respects this law is ambiguous and ineffective and should be used as a model with care.

"A third method is to make the raising of the debt limit dependent on review by a state commission set up for the purpose. Such a law would provide that whenever the state commission is convinced of the necessity of a particular project, it may authorize the municipality to incur indebtedness in excess of its debt limit, with the further proviso that the resultant indebtedness to the United States government is not to be included in computing the statutory debt. Such provisions are to be found in the recent Rhode Island act passed at the June, 1933, session constituting Chapter 2078 of the public laws of 1933. While certain other features of this law, such as the review by the state commission of all public works projects, are undesirable because of the delay incident to a multiple review, there is much to be said for not allowing municipalities to borrow in excess of their debt limits except where a state commission has first approved the loan.

Virginia Law Cited.
"A fourth method, and probably the best, is exemplified by Chapter 26 of the acts passed by the extra session of the general assembly of Virginia in 1933. This law is in effect for a limited period of time and does not specifically waive the debt limit by the federal emergency administrator of public works to the counties, cities and towns of Virginia. It supercedes the provisions of all inconsistent laws, general or special, including charters, and confers powers which are in addition to the powers conferred in other laws. Instead of being simply a revenue bond act or removing the specific restrictions, or raising the debt limit, and going no further, the Virginia act accomplishes all of these results and at the same time sweeps away all statutory limitations on the issuance of bonds containing in other statutes of the state. It is in effect a general bond act of limited application complete in its self, both as to powers and as to procedure.

"The Virginia act, however, should not be used as a model except with caution. Constitutional limitations in each state differ in many respects and this should be carefully checked and considered before any legislation is passed. The legal division of the federal emergency administration of public works is always ready and willing to co-operate in the drafting of any necessary legislation.

Change in Laws Urged.
"A perfect system of laws would permit municipalities to borrow heavily in bad times when their needs are greater, and would restrict them in boom times when extravagance and mismanagement are likely to result. The most striking attribute of the perfect system, however, would be its flexibility. At present most systems are imperfect because they are rigid, strait-jackets, because they were designed in days when debt was considered cause for reproach, and when the functions of wise spending were not appreciated.

"The main object of any legislation should be to make more expedient the obtaining of loans and grants from the administration and the removal of the numerous restrictions, ambiguities and outright contradictions which at present seriously hamper municipalities when they come to the federal emergency administration of public works for a loan or a grant."

64 COUNTIES APPLY FOR EDUCATIONAL RELIEF FROM U. S.

Forty per cent of the state's 159 counties have applied for assistance under one or more of the various branches of educational relief work now being launched in the state and 95 per cent of the counties applying have shown a need for such assistance, it was announced Wednesday by the Georgia relief commission.

In addition, it was announced that 300 jobless teachers have applied for work and 150 of those applying have been approved. P. S. Barrett, of the state department of education, and Paul W. Chapman, of the department of vocational education, are working with the relief commission in launching the program.

The commission announced that plans for its fight on illiteracy were going forward rapidly and that classes would begin soon.

The first vocational education classes to be conducted under the relief program are expected to get underway in the Blackwell community in Cobb county some time next week.

Dr. Bristol To Speak At Social Conference

Dr. Leverett D. Bristol, health director of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, of New York, will speak on the subject, "The Hospital Needs of a Community," at a city-wide conference of social work arranged by the Social Welfare Council. The conference begins Monday night, October 23, at the Young Women's Christian Association on Auburn avenue. Other subjects to be discussed include: "The Challenge of Leisure," and "The Trends of Relief."

Dr. J. R. McCain, president of the council, will outline the purpose and plans of the conference at the first meeting. Dr. David Marx, pioneer in Atlanta social work, will be one of the speakers. Dr. Bristol is a graduate of Johns Hopkins Medical school, and holds the degree of doctor of public health from Harvard. He has had extensive experience in public health work.

'UNCLE NICK' RANSOM PASSES AT AGE OF 84

Picturesque Veteran of Civil War Was Favorite of Children in His Neighborhood.

Nicholas T. Ransom, 84, known to Atlantans as "Uncle Nick," died Wednesday morning at his residence at 67 Weatherly street, S. E., following an illness of a month. He was a veteran of the War Between the States and was a native of South Carolina.

Funeral services will be held at 12:15 o'clock this afternoon at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, with the Rev. Father Joseph E. Moynihan officiating. Burial will be in Crest Lawn cemetery.

A resident of Atlanta since the War Between the States, through which he served under General Nathan Bedford Forrest, Mr. Ransom was well known and was the favorite of the children in his neighborhood. He was formerly engaged in contracting.

Surviving are his wife; two sons, V. E. and C. E. Ransom, of Atlanta; a daughter, Mrs. T. T. Ray, of Columbus, Ga.; and a sister, Mrs. Sara Parkerson, of Fresno, Cal. Sam Greenberg & Company are in charge of the arrangements.

CUTCLIFFE RESIDENCE WIFE'S, LAWYER SAYS

Explanation of the purchase of a home on Club drive in which Walter Cutcliffe, former inmate of the federal penitentiary on a liquor charge, was arrested on lottery charges, was made Wednesday by Attorney Paul Lindsay, who represented Cutcliffe in his previous trouble.

Lindsay said that the home was bought by Mrs. Cutcliffe, who paid $2,500 down on a $8,500 purchase price, and that the balance is to be paid in monthly installments. Lindsay's statement was prompted by reports that representatives of the intelligence unit of the federal treasury department were looking into Cutcliffe's income tax record on the basis of a report that he had just bought a $8,500 home. Presentation of the lottery case against Cutcliffe is expected in the session of the grand jury Friday.

Refuses Attorney, Gets 10 to 20 Years

After he had declared in Judge John D. Humphries' superior court that "the state has no lawyer and I don't see why I need one," Clyde Browning, charged with burglarizing a Rogers store in Center Hill in July, lost his self-defended case and was sentenced to from 10 to 20 years on the chain gang. Browning questioned witnesses and delivered his own argument to the jury. Court officials said that Browning was offered a lawyer several weeks ago and, again last week when his trial was set, was told Judge Humphries stood willing to appoint his defense. When the Browning case was called Wednesday Browning again declined to accept free legal advice.

Atlanta Banks Ready To Make Cotton Loans

Atlanta banks Wednesday announced that they were ready to make cotton loans under President Roosevelt's plan to boost the price of staple.

The banks are expected to make loans applied for between now and about November 1, when the federal government will get its financing corporation in operation, and even after that date if they feel that they can and desire to carry them.

The three members of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, the First National, the Fulton National and the Citizens & Southern National, Tuesday informed Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, that they are able to care for a large number of loans and it will not be necessary for the government's financing corporation to take over the loans unless they reach an unexpected figure. All three Atlanta banks reported that they had a fairly large surplus on hand and were not only willing, but anxious, to make the loans of 10 cents a pound under the government's specifications.

NRA COMPLIANCE BODY TO HEAR COMPLAINTS

Second Meeting of Atlanta Board Faces 135 Charges Against Employers.

NRA compliance board members will sit before another large batch of complaints that Atlanta employers are "cheating" on recovery pledges and agreements at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon when the group will meet for the second time since organization. Approximately 100 petitions for exception to NRA provisions and about 135 complaints against employers had been filed with the board last week that employers cited had been interviewed and showed a willingness to correct their procedure of NRA operation. He said employers had been violating the codes through a misunderstanding of the rules.

An employer who discharges an employee for suspected or real complaints against the employer's operation under the code is subject to punishment by removal of the Blue Eagle insignia, Mr. Lasseter warned. He said that such would be a clear case of NRA violation and urged employers not to hesitate to report facts of violation.

Complaints and petitions for exception should be addressed or taken to the compliance board at the Chamber of Commerce building.

EARTHQUAKE IN PERU KILLS 1, INJURES 5

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Relay dispatches from Lima, Peru, describe today a terrific earthquake which crumbled hills and rocked jungle areas in the Ollachea district of Carabaya province. One death and five injuries were reported.

ADVENTURESS SEEKS DIVORCE FROM BIDDLE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Socially prominent Nannie Hope Dale Biddle, of Philadelphia, who sought adventure in Alaska's trackless wastes two years ago, is in Reno seeking a divorce.

She filed suit yesterday against Edward M. Biddle, charging cruelty. In December, 1931, the young society matron created a sensation by leaving her three young children and setting out from New York to spend a winter "roughing it" in Alaska.

During her sojourn there was snow-bound several days in an isolated cabin and although an attempt was made to rescue her by plane, she spurned the rescuers. She finally returned to civilization by dog team.

TENNESSEAN IS GUILTY IN FIRE MURDERS OF 4

JACKSONBORO, Tenn., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Floyd Johnson, 27-year-old Lafollette filling station operator, was convicted on charges of burning his wife and three children to death the night of August 30. The jury recommended a sentence of 21 years in the state penitentiary.

ATLANTA, GA., OCT. 19, 1933.

PERIL OF STREETS GROWS.

The necessity for radical steps to be taken to lessen the hazard on the streets of Atlanta is emphasized by police department records showing that every month this year has shown an increase in automobile accidents over the same month in 1932 and that a larger number of men, women and children have been killed in these accidents than were the victims of last year's crashes.

The record is incontrovertible evidence of the ineffectiveness of the numerous police "drives" which have been launched during this year to enforce better observance of the traffic ordinances.

During the period of each of these drives there has been some lessening in the number of accidents and victims, only to have conditions grow worse when the police, as has been their invariable custom in the past, have again settled down to a half-hearted attempt at enforcement.

A wave of general indignation is sweeping the city of Memphis over the fact that automobile accidents there have totaled 1,386 this year and that in these accidents 38 people have been killed.

In Atlanta, a city of approximately the same size and with no greater traffic control difficulties, there have been during the same period 2,094 accidents in which 50 lives were snuffed out.

Government reports show that some months ago that only Denver of 11 of the large cities of the country had a higher rate of mortality from automobile accidents than Atlanta. With the continued increase in accidents since that time, it is now probable that Atlanta is in the unenviable and inexcusable position of leading the entire country in this respect.

Time and again the police authorities have promised to make the streets safer for innocent motorists and pedestrians, "even if it took every man on the force to do it." The only result has been the steady increase of accidents and fatalities recorded by police records.

The greatest threat to life and property in Atlanta now lies in the lack of proper control of traffic within the city's limits. The time has come when the people can no longer be expected to put up with existing conditions, and if the present police officials are impotent to bring about an improvement, they should turn over the job to others who can.

THE NEED FOR RELIEF.
Despite the marked decrease in unemployment during the past few months, there will, according to Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, be at least 15,000,000 men, women and children in the country during the coming winter who will be dependent upon charity for food and shelter.

The greater part of these unfortunates will be cared for by state, county and local public funds, which will be augmented by grants from the federal treasury.

But there are others—the aged, the young who have lost their natural providers, and the infirm—who will have to be cared for, as heretofore, by such agencies as the Community Chest.

The fact that so many million former wage earners will still be out of work during the approaching cold season makes it all the more necessary that long established local charities be liberally supported. Many of the unemployed in years gone by have aided unfortunate relatives, friends and neighbors. Now without lucrative employment they are unable to do so, and thus the demand on organized charity is materially increased, notwithstanding the huge sums of public money that are being allotted for relief of the unemployed.

The people of Atlanta in subscribing to the Community Chest this fall must bear in mind that unemployment relief and local charity are two separate and distinct things. If the Chest contributions are not larger than ever before, it means that the dependent aged and infirm of the community will suffer for food, shelter and proper care.

MORE LIGHT ON THE PILLAGE.

As the senate investigation further lifts the veil from the inner workings during the boom days, and even later, of certain Wall Street financial houses, the extent to which these activities, and the methods employed, are responsible for the plight of the country today, becomes increasingly apparent.

Former President Wiggins, of the Chase National bank, admits that, in order to circumvent the law prohibiting banks dealing in investment securities, he inaugurated the back-door process of a separate organization, owned by the bank, for this purpose.

Through this unethical method of evasion of the spirit of the law his house—like other Wall Street banking temples—dumped hundreds of millions of worthless securities on the market, and, after a rake-off of millions in commissions, left innocent investors with the bag to hold.

When these revelations were first made public last year the bank, realizing the critical position in which it was placed, promptly got rid of Mr. Wiggins, whose annual revenue from salaries and bonuses had been in excess of a third of a million dollars.

This discredited financier was retired on an annual "pension" of $100,000, granted so that the bank might continue to have the benefit of his "advice," but there is no record of his counsel ever having been sought. On the contrary, the bank's new policies have been radically different from those he inaugurated, and were adopted without even consulting him.

The bank's new president, Winthrop W. Aldrich, a son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, is a man of broad vision and unquestioned integrity and through the establishment of new and conservative policies he seems determined to free the bank from the effects of the mischief wrought under the administration of his predecessor.

Until a few years ago the financial leaders of Wall Street were viewed in the light of models of business acumen and efficiency—the very pillars of our financial structure. The disclosures incident to the senate investigations have revealed many of them as financial pirates who, in their lack of vision, failed to see that their own acts were undermining the nation's financial structure.

A very harmful feature of the situation that has resulted from the era of pillage and plunder brought about by the unethical methods of these so-called Wall Street high financiers is the mistrust that has been created towards the entire banking system of the nation. Even the safest and soundest banks in the country have had to bear a part of the burden.

Fortunately this nation-wide lack of confidence is rapidly disappearing before the certainty that congress at its next session will take steps to prevent the recurrence of any such era of looting in the future.

There is no blacker record in the history of American finance than that written during the period of pillage and plunder from 1920 to 1929, and it is apparent that both the administration and congress are determined that the loopholes in the existing laws which permitted the looting of billions of dollars from the innocent investors of the country shall be stopped.

By PIERRE VAN PAASEN

Incendiaries Of Europe.

Mr. J. L. Garrison, chief editor of the London Observer, a journalist who has a status comparable only to that of a responsible statesman, who has always been utterly conservative and objective in his discussions of the European situation, and whose authority is unquestioned throughout Europe, has this to say of the present situation: "France is remaining utterly calm in the face of the incessant provocation from across the Rhine. Millions of nazi have been set on fire by the most irresponsible, incendiary talk, they are asking the impossible. They want to get back all the German colonies. They want Denmark, dismembered. They want Alsace-Lorraine, chunks of Poland, the best part of Czechoslovakia, a piece of Belgium, the islands belonging to Australia, the territories of the Union of South Africa.

"They want Austria. They want the Tyrol. But," he goes on, "not a single concession to the nazi could now serve the cause of peace. The slightest concession now would only augment the menacing enthusiasm of the nazi. Has Hitler the courage to moderate the zeal of his followers? . . . Witnesses who still have a little sympathy for him, don't believe it. There is a great doubt. He must tell his nazi to go down. If he does not make that intelligent concession to peace, there can be no other peace but a grave menace to world peace."

Hiding the Truth.

German travelers returning from England, reports Reuters, are liable to arrest and imprisonment if they are found at the frontier to be in possession of British newspapers or magazines containing articles or reports attacking Germany or the German government. The same penalty applies to the possessors of other such foreign newspapers. The reminder of this fact, the Rheinland governing authorities state that large numbers of such newspapers and magazines have already been seized from returning German travelers. Whether the travelers were arrested or not is not stated. The authorities state that it is "unworthy conduct" for a German to support foreign newspaper proprietors, who "use all possible means to prevent the revival of Germany by buying their publications in the nazi way." It becomes possible to hide the truth at the same time.

'Barefaced Robbery.'

This application is applied by a new Japanese magazine printed in English and circulating in Europe to the British colonial policy in India. The magazine, which cannot be read from bondage. This cannot be done until Britain has been driven out of India for it is "forced" by the force of military occupation of India that Britain keeps her outrageous domination over Egypt, Arabia, Persia, Afghanistan, Nepal and other parts of the Asiatic continent.

The implication is that Japan should step forth in the role of crusader to remove the British. Britain is furthermore accused of "abominable tactics" to isolate Japan internationally.

Health Talks

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY

ERADICATING OF HOOKWORM INFESTATION.

Under favorable conditions, the eggs of the common round worm (lunbricoid) may live in the soil for several years. The eggs and larvae of hookworm will live in the soil for at least a year. The eggs or larvae of both worms get into the soil only through the unclean habits of man, for these worms reach their adult stage and pass through the larval stage of their existence only in the outer world.

The hookworm larvae are killed by complete drying of the upper layer of soil or by freezing. That accounts for the rare occurrence of hookworm disease in Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, and elsewhere in the arid zone where it does not occur in the north where the soil freezes every winter.

In heavily infested regions of the south the health authorities have found that the most effective way to eradicate hookworm disease is by teaching the rural inhabitants the sanitary disposal of feces. More burial of feces is not effective, for hookworm larvae will migrate up through four feet of soil, though they do not migrate laterally. Next in importance is the use of a light superphosphate barefoot, for it is by penetration of the skin between the toes by the larvae (ground itch) that infection occurs.

Much experience has shown that the best worm medicine for freeing the intestine from hookworms is a combination of carbolic acid and carbon tetrachloride. Either of these alone is a good remedy against hookworms or common to the human system, but they are more effective and less likely to produce any poisonous effects.

The patient should have a mild purgative the afternoon previous to treatment, a light supper the evening before, no food next morning. At 7 a. m. the patient receives a dose of carbolic tetrachloride in a hard gelatin capsule. At 8 a. m. a dose of carbolic tetrachloride in a capsule. At 9 a. m. a large dose of Epsom salts, never castor oil or other oil. If the salts fail to purge the patient within an hour, another dose of salts should then be given. Such a treatment removes 90 to 95 per cent of the hookworms with a minimum of danger to the patient.

For a child from 5 to 10 years of age the usual doses of the medicines are 10 drops of carbolic tetrachloride and a light supper the evening before, no food next morning. At 7 a. m. the patient receives a dose of carbolic tetrachloride in a capsule. At 8 a. m. a dose of carbolic tetrachloride in a capsule. At 9 a. m. a large dose of Epsom salts, never castor oil or other oil. If the salts fail to purge the patient within an hour, another dose of salts should then be given. Such a treatment removes 90 to 95 per cent of the hookworms with a minimum of danger to the patient.

Persons who indulge in alcoholic beverages should not take carbon tetrachloride unless under medical care. The poisonous effect of chenopodium or its active principle, chenopodium, is dizziness, ringing in the ears, tingling of the fingers, headache.

The timely dose of salts, to sweep out the bowels and the carbon tetrachloride is an important part of the treatment, and the worm medicine should not be given unless the patient is prepared to take the full dose of salts an hour afterward.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon.

MONEY WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Economic advisers to the president are running around tearing their hair about the monetary rumors in current circulation.

The latest one is that the president considers devaluation absurd and will probably issue currency in a restrained inflationary way.

Treasury officials swooned on masse like the Russian ballet in the "March of the Wooden Soldier," when they heard that one. At first they feared some monetary crank had reached the presidential ear and then circulated the story. Then they thought the idea behind it was to create confusion and heighten public interest in what the president may ultimately do.

PLAN Their feet-on-the-ground view of the monetary situation is simple as A B C.

Only two courses are known to have been seriously recommended to the president, unless he is getting secret advice from an ouija board.

The first course is that he do nothing except issue a statement. In this statement he could say the value of the dollar today is indeterminate. It has not yet found its natural level. Too many speculative influences are at work on it.

He could say that next year some time, when the dollar finds its natural level, he will reorganize the monetary system. But never would he do anything to debase the currency of the country.

That would be fine—if congress were not convening in January.

BACKGROUND Anyone who knows anything about the existing Washington situation will realize congress cannot be expected to go along with a sane policy like that. It has a majority for inflation, swift, wild inflation, any kind. It cannot be put off much longer, even by Mr. Roosevelt: it can be expected to force his hand at the first opportunity.

Therefore Mr. Roosevelt must consider the existing political situation in his currency policy. Not only must he promise a currency stability which will dispel existing financial uncertainty, he must also do something which will prevent the wolves in congress from taking the situation out of his hands.

A statement clearing up existing doubts is all he needs to prevent creeping paralysis of the capital market, but it would leave him a continuous battle with the inflationists.

He may decide on that course, but his best friends doubt it.

ALTERNATIVE The only other alternative is to make a stab now at what would be a good value for the dollar and devalue to that point before January 3.

Today the stab would probably hit 66 cents. Last week it would have been 63 cents. No one can tell what it will be next week. That is only of secondary importance. If you are going to make a stab, you must know it will be between 63 and 66 cents, and say 70, it does not make much real difference exactly which point you hit.

Mr. Roosevelt is not anxious to make this stab. The main reason for his shyness is doubt about what it will do to commodity prices. Most economists believe it will remove whatever speculative hope is left in the commodity markets.

But it would also remove currency uncertainty and permit normal foreign business.

The big thing is that it would take the matter out of the hands of congress before the wolves can assemble.

METHODS The best inside monetary experts are advising against the devaluation process suggested by the committee for the nation. That committee wants the president to devalue the price of gold, instead of reducing the number of gold dollars in the dollar.

The reason for this is, related to a great extent, but the natural way to proceed would be through direct dollar action.

FUNDAMENTALS There are no foreign exchange obstacles to devaluation this minute if the president wants to do it.

It would be better if we could get an agreement with England. Such an agreement would encourage world confidence in the success of the move. But it is not necessary.

Most foreign exchange experts concede that Britain will follow our lead in readjusting her currency to a working, living basis. We do not care about France. Our devaluation would probably force her to accept our basis.

LA GUARDIA The best inside McKee sources say odds on their candidate right now ought to be about 4 to 5.

That represents a change from a week ago when McKee was a heavier favorite.

The reason for the change is the very forceful campaign being conducted by that shrewd politician, ex-congressman LaGuardia. His promise to restore city salary cuts and the raising of the Jewish issue were considered master political strokes.

PECORA Wall Street has been squirming under the Pecora lash. Its spokesmen have been rushing into high places with the protest that the senate committee prosecutor is conducting his district attorneyship campaign from the committee table. They got very little sympathy from officials on whose shoulders they wept.

The incident shows, however, that Pecora has not been pulling his punches.

NOTES The inside situation indicates Senator Bone will get his twelve millions for completion of the Seattle municipal power plant. Some strong political influences are working in his behalf which will bring about an inner democratic inspection if the money is not forthcoming.

All government officials are bragging about the inner improvement in the banking situation. They believe they have everything fixed to meet any cash demands anywhere now.

Mr. Roosevelt's friends say he is like the boy prodigy whose fond parents expected so much of him that they were disappointed when he went to school and got less than 100 in everything. An observer replied he was more like the average boy who went to school and got such good marks his parents thought he was a prodigy.

If We Pray for Common Sense, We May Not Have To Pray for Rain

By Robert Quillen

One spring years ago, following a period of expansion and speculation, America began to develop the typical symptoms of depression. Prices fell, banks closed, securities were dumped, jobless men walked the streets.

And then in the early fall the whole bad business ended almost in a day.

Europe had suffered a disastrous crop failure. America had produced one of the greatest crops in her history. And hungry Europe's gold made America prosperous again.

This time the story may be reversed.

You may not care about crop figures; but you do care about eating, and this concerns your morning toast.

The government is urging farmers to plant less wheat in order to raise the price. It offers a kind of bribe to win their co-operation. And as this is written, it is offering the orient 35,000,000 bushels, at a figure below the world price, in order to reduce the quantity of wheat in this country.

The idea is to make wheat scarce, for scarcity is the only thing that will insure a high price.

Nature is helping in a good work along; and if she continues her help for another year or two, somebody is going hungry.

Do you know how much wheat we have on hand? Neither does anybody else. Government experts say 385,000,000 bushels. But they take available production records and subtract available consumption records and assume that the difference is left on hand.

But they say most of that 385,000,000 bushels is held on farms. That may sound right to a government expert, but not to people who know something about farming.

Wheat "left on the farm" is fed to stock or eaten by chickens, pigeons and rats, or spoiled by mold and weevils. Very little of it ever will be flour.

There isn't enough wheat held in sight to feed America a year. This year the wheat section suffered the greatest drought in a generation. Kansas, banner wheat producing state, harvested but a fifth of her normal crop.

Wheat land is hard and dry. Even a normal snowfall this winter cannot stop up enough moisture to produce a normal crop.

Wheat is a heavy drinker. It takes an average of 1,044 pounds of water to produce a pound of wheat. And another year of drought, plus a little more government generosity, should make bread scarce enough to please everybody but the city poor.

Man Well After 3 Years With Bullet in Heart

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Oct. 18.—

Periodically for nearly three years, Dr. Charles M. Stemen has examined a patient who has a bullet in his heart, he said today in good health.

On November 27, 1930, at the family home near Hills Summit, Kan., where Bennett still lives, a rifle was accidentally discharged as Darrell Bennett, a brother was taking it down from a wall.

The bullet struck Virgil behind the left ear, pierced the mastoid cells there and was deflected downward through the esophagus, lodging in the pericardium or fibrous heart covering.

Surgeons agreed an operation was unnecessary as long as the bullet gave no signs of moving.

Dr. Stemen said Bennett worked as a summer on the farm of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Bennett.

U. S. ASSURES STATE OF EARLY RELEASE FOR ROAD FUNDS

torney-General M. J. Yeomans, of Georgia, and Hugh Howell, of Atlanta, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, the governor arrived in Washington early this morning and immediately started a round of official calls and conferences which culminated in a brief visit to the White House just before returning to state capital late today.

First he, Chairman Howell and Attorney-General Yeomans called on Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes, the national public works administrator, and later spent some time with attorneys for the administration in going over details of the projects.

Discusses Fund Situation.
After leaving the public works administration Governor Talmadge said he also had discussed with Secretary Ickes and his associates the general public works situation in Georgia as well as a number of other individual projects. Several of the latter, all of a self-liquidating character, may be approved later, he said, but added that he preferred not to identify them at the moment.

In the aggregate the four projects tentatively adopted today are scheduled to provide employment for several hundred men over a period of nearly a year. The state prison, which will furnish work for 450 men at the peak of operations, it was estimated. It was said that the prison can be completed in six months with facilities capable of accommodating between 3,000 and 4,000 prisoners.

Governor Talmadge, who was highly elated over the treatment accorded him by public works officials, the face of state financing problems, indicated that it was his plan ultimately to transfer all state prisoners to the new institution.

Howell Proposed Leases.
The leasing plan under which the new state projects will be constructed is in keeping with a proposal made by Chairman Hugh Howell at the time the prison project was first filed with the state public works board. With respect to the prison project, which was the first application filed with the state board and the first one approved by it, the lease of the buildings and improvements incidental to the development will be over a period of five years, with annual payments in the amount of $80,000 including interest and amortization.

In assuring Governor Talmadge that the lease project would be a profitable one, it was revealed, acting on instructions from President Roosevelt, who prior to the conference had been in the state capital, had sent over a memorandum asking that a way be found for approval of the projects.

Before contracts can be let for the work, a few legal details remain to be worked out but neither Governor Talmadge, Attorney-General Yeomans or Chairman Howell had reason to believe this would unduly delay the situation.

As the author of the brief filed with the Georgia public works board in the first instance, Chairman Howell was particularly pleased with the action of officials here today.

"Construction of the prison and the three bridges," he said "will not only give Georgia much needed additional facilities but will provide employment for several hundred idle workers. The funds will be a great help to the state at this time."

U. S. to Retain Title.
While Administrator Ickes is yet to make a definite statement of plans for solving the general public works problem of Georgia, the assurance he and his associates gave the governor and his party today is taken as evidence enough of at least one method that will be adopted. Wherever possible it is believed the projects will be undertaken by the government itself on the same leasing basis, with the government retaining nominal title until the project can be amortized through annual payments over a period of years.

Still another method which has been suggested by the state board calls for the government authorizing loans for state projects and collecting by deducting portions of federal appropriations going to the state an amount, such as the regular federal aid highway funds.

Aside from the low-cost housing and slum clearance loans of approximately $5,000,000 announced for Atlanta last week, the amount involved in the four projects discussed here today is the largest indicated thus far for Georgia.

DAY BY DAY

In Georgia's History

Fifty-one years ago today Woodrow Wilson, later president of the United States, passed the bar examination in Atlanta.

On October 25, 1905, a state convention was called by whom the constitution was amended and what was done?

For the two best 25-word original answers to the foregoing question, Joe Grand, teacher, co-operating with The Constitution, will award two pairs of guess tickets to see "Night Flight." Answers must be mailed to the Day by Day Editor, The Constitution, and must be received not later than midnight tomorrow.

"Night Flight" is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, starring John Barrymore, Helen Hayes, Clarke Gable, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy. This picture is a week's run at the Grand Friday.

Today's winner: Mrs. C. M. Smith, 585 Boulevard place, N. E., Apartment 7, L. W. Thomas, 578 Boulevard place, N. E. Guess tickets are mailed to the winners each day.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Sue Santry's New York employer, Henry Hume, is called suddenly to Paris on business and takes her along to help Mathilda Fetherstone, his secretary. In the brilliant French capital two months, Sue and Mathilda see nothing of it, having to grind away at their typewriters, and Sue is in a rebellious mood when they board the boat train for Havre and New York. When a porter informs them they are in the compartment engaged for the exclusive use of a young man, he appears and courteously offers to share it with them. Sue, her mood still ruffled, curtly refuses. That evening Sue falls asleep in her deck chair on the liner Tontoon and when she awakes the ship is being tossed in a heavy rainstorm. As she dashes for shelter, the ship pitches and she is going over the rail when the young man of the boat train grasps her by the ankle. Sue's leg is badly wrenched and the young man, who tells her he is Jeffrey Randall, calls the ship's doctor. Jeffrey is sympathetic and thoughtful next day when her ankle confines her to her deck chair but Sue distrusts this man of wealth. Next day he is solitary and helps her to the deck. Mrs. S. Van Pelt-Cragston asks to introduce here cousin, Delphine Cragston, to Jeffrey, but Delphine Cragston is interested in only one man, a Boston Tech boy, who is now running a New Jersey garage. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

Mathilda Fetherstone's ample bosom shook with suppressed amusement. "I'll have to hand it to you, Jeffrey," she said. "You did the finest job of knocking down ears I've seen. The Cragston knows something happened to her, but I'll wager you a box of your favorite lead pencils she doesn't know what." "Hope I wasn't a mucker." "Absolutely not. You did nothing said nothing. Nothing, all nicely frapped with a lump of ice on top." "Her kind must be dealt with rather brutally." Sue's interest was meant to be exaggerated. "You mean," she asked, "the kind of women who pursue you?" Mathilda moved uneasily. That this edge of sarcasm again. What was wrong with Sue, anyway? Couldn't she see the nice young man was honestly annoyed by the attention being thrust on him. She'd have to take Sue in hand. The girl was getting sour. "Did sound like a bit of prig, didn't it?" This face had reddened under the sting but now the boyish air shone through again. "I don't mean to be—see it's not I who interests—Mrs. Cragston, for example. It's—I suppose what you might call circumstances." "I guess Sue's ankle is nagging her," Mathilda offered. Sue felt a twinge of pain—her conscience, not her ankle! She was the prig. "Anyhow," Jeffrey said, and breathed deep of the tonic air, "I've an idea, and that's something. The captain has asked me to bring you up on the bridge. We're old shipmates, that is," cautiously, "whenever I cross I get Captain McKay to ferry me over and back. You'll have a different sea-going slant from the bridge and there's an elevator to the captain's quarters."

"I vote yes," Mathilda said. "The only bridge I've ever stood on were built over rivers."

Sue admitted, "I've love it, if you don't think I'll be too much bother." Time she showed a bit of graciousness. She'd been doing nothing except snapping. And seeing a ship's bridge would be fun.

By noon Sue's angle was so much improved she decided to lunch in the dining room. Thither she was escorted by Mathilda and by Jeffrey, who insisted he would return for her. He was having a "snack" in the grill. The professor and his wife had already come down when she arrived at the table, but the places of Mrs. Cragston and Delphine were empty.

The soup had been served and the entrée was imminent when Mathilda leaned toward Sue and said in a low voice:

"We're in luck. The Cragston has left. She's with a party of three over near the captain's table and there's an empty place, probably for Delphine. Look as if she's had herself moved."

Anger, hurt pride, danced in Sue's eyes. "To avoid contamination by the working classes, no doubt—the great unwashed. Imagine having to go home and admit to the fact that she was seated with a couple of typists!"

"Imagine our having to go home and tell our friends we were seated with a mother who tries to devour her young!" Mathilda countered. "Oh—not really! The professor's wife was so frightened at the suggestion that Sue had to laugh."

"Merely a figure of speech," Sue reassured her. "In a way, it's right." "I'm so relieved that Mrs. Cragston has decided to go elsewhere. She annoyed my husband, and I know he annoyed her. He's quite absent-minded, at times. She told him she didn't believe he was forgetful at all—that it was just a pose."

"What did he say to that?" Mathilda wanted to know. "He told her he couldn't be certain, he was sure to be biased; but he thought she might be right, since any one who knew as much about posing as she did was bound to be right."

"My compliments to you, professor," Mathilda laughed until the tears came. "You certainly told off the Cragston to a dot."

Jeffrey came in when dessert was being served. "Met Delphine Cragston in the bar," he said, when he had been introduced to the professor and his wife and Mathilda. "She told me her mother had 'changed the set,' moved to another table. Delphine refused to change, so she's drinking her meals in the bar."

"Nice of the child to spare our battered feelings," she said. "Her mother is incensed at being seated with the sweaty proletariat."

"The woman's a fool," Jeffrey's hands clenched in his lap. "Maybe I'm in luck. If you don't mind, I'd like to move into one of the chairs for the duration of the journey. I haven't lighted a place yet. Been eating in the grill."

"To avoid being seated with detriments?" Sue's voice was sweet. "No," he said. "To avoid time limits. I'm a lazy dog, inclined to be irregular in my habits."

"Please don't inconvenience yourself on our account. We're quite impervious to snubs, aren't we, Matty? Being workers, we can't afford to indulge ourselves in feelings."

"Oh, yes we can," Mathilda said, making a mental vow she would force Sue to see the doctor. The girl must be full of bile. "By all means stick your name on the back of that chair, Jeffrey. We need another man. The table's top-heavy with women."

"Then I shall—this is with your permission." He addressed the professor and his wife.

"Excuse us, please," Jeffrey moved forward, crowding the angular woman away from the entrance. "Miss Santry is seeing no one. She's had an accident."

"Too bad she didn't have it earlier. Might have saved her a great deal of trouble." The woman raised her voice. "Continued Tomorrow."

15-Cent Staple Demanded By Cotton Co-operatives

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 18.—The cotton co-operatives today demanded 15-cent cotton, as fulfillment of the administration's pledge of pre-war parity, and called upon other organizations throughout the nation to join them immediately in a drive to win the promised parity for all basic agricultural commodities.

Acting through the board of directors of the American Cotton Co-operative Association, representing 250,000 growers, the co-ops also demanded that the federal government immediately advance 4 cents a pound to holders of "pilot" options. This would keep the 2,400,000 bales of option cotton off the market, and allow the farmer to benefit by the advance in price to the pre-war parity which has been promised by the administration. Without this loan, it was stated, the 300,000 farmers holding such options would probably dump them on the market at an early date because of their dire need for cash.

Although asserting that the 10-cent loan does not fulfill the administration's pledge of parity, the A. C. C. A. declared wholehearted support of the plan, as confirmed yesterday, and threw behind the weight of their entire organization. Increase of the cotton loan to 15 cents a pound was asked as soon as growers have fulfilled their 1934 acreage reduction pledge. B. L. Redwine, president, Georgia Cotton Co-operative Association, said he would return home immediately and call upon the state chambers of commerce, bankers, business men and farmers everywhere to join in the nationwide movement.

"It is recognized that the secretary of agriculture has legal sanction to bring about the pre-war parity at will, in line with the announced program," Mr. Redwine said, "but such parity may be delayed beyond the time when it will be of any advantage to growers of the present cotton crop. Every day's delay not only reduces the farmer's buying and marketing power, but likewise weakens the economic processes of the entire nation. Precedent for establishing pre-war parity value on farm products has already been set by the national administration's recent action in the matter of fine-cured tobacco."

The cotton co-operatives' plan, Mr. Redwine said, is presented with the idea of "co-operating with the president in making the national policy effective in the earliest practicable moment." It calls for carrying through the ten-cent loan program and the four-cent advance on the pilot option cotton as a means of preventing any further decline in the price of cotton, but also to make an additional loan of five cents a pound on this.

FORMER PRESIDENT OF CINCINNATI U. DIES

Pneumonia Fatal to Dr. Howard Ayres, Nationally Known Educator.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Dr. Howard Ayres, 72, former president of the University of Cincinnati and a nationally known educator, died Tuesday of pneumonia.

Dr. Ayres came to Cincinnati in 1889 from the University of Missouri, where he was professor of biology, and served five years as head of the school here. He left the institution to become president of the Cincinnati Elevator Manufacturing Company. He retired several years later and devoted his time to writing papers on scientific and educational subjects.

REV. BENJAMIN FEW, LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 18.—(AP)—The Rev. Benjamin A. Few, 74, superintendent of the Methodist ministry, died at his home here early today.

He held several pastorates in Arkansas and was a former president of the Arkansas Anti-Saloon League and a director of the American Anti-Saloon League.

He was a cousin of Dr. W. P. Few, president of Duke University, Durham, N. C.

DR. JOHN E. LANE, NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Dr. John E. Lane, 61, noted dermatologist, was fatally stricken with a heart attack last night as he was entering the home of a patient.

Dr. Lane, author of numerous articles on his specialty, was graduated from Yale University in 1894 and from the Yale School of Medicine in 1903. He also studied in Berlin and Paris.

ROBERT D. PHILLIPS, LAURINBURG, N. C., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Robert Derrick Phillips, 80, former publisher of the Laurinburg Exchange, died at his home here early today.

Jay, a descendant of John Jay, first justice of the United States supreme court, served as minister to Romania and El Salvador. He was born in Newport, R. I., August 22, 1877. He is survived by his widow, a daughter and a brother.

He will be buried Friday in the family burial ground at Rye, N. Y.

North Dakota Militia To Enforce Embargo

BISMARCK, N. D., Oct. 18.—(AP)—The entire North Dakota national guard was ordered held in readiness by Governor William Langer today to enforce his embargo against shipments of wheat from the state.

The embargo, effective at 12:01 a. m. Thursday, was proclaimed by the governor to call attention, he said, to the distress of farmers from low prices for wheat. North Dakota is the leading wheat producing state this year.

Adjutant General Earle Scales was ordered to have every member of 1,200 strong national guard force available to aid in necessary enforcement of his order.

Meteor Flashes Path Across Atlanta's Sky

A brilliant phenomenon of the heavens occurred here at 11:15 o'clock Wednesday night when a meteor, traveling fast at a low altitude, swept across the city from the southeast to the northwest. G. W. Cunningham, of 51 Waddell street, S. E., watched the body during its brief flight.

Mr. Cunningham said the meteor flashed across the sky at only a short distance from the ground. It had a long trail and emanated a bright, bluish-white light. It passed over Atlanta in a very few seconds, he said.

In Georgia's Fields and Streams

By H. A. CARTER

FACTORS IN DISTRIBUTION.

It is axiomatic, of course, that the animal life of north Georgia is vastly different from that of south Georgia. Inquiry into the reason for this is a different matter. There are some species found only in north Georgia, such as the chipmunk. There are other species that are limited to south Georgia, such as the green tree-frog. There are others that are distributed over the entire state, such as the timber rattler. Why?

There are factors in animal distribution that take no great study to determine. There are others that have so far baffled the best minds that science has been able to throw against them. Let's consider for a moment some of the factors in animal distribution that related directly to this state.

Consider the barriers to dispersal. These are of two major types: topographic and climatic. Topographic barriers are simply regional areas of such nature that animals cannot migrate across them. One would hardly expect the bullfrogs of the Mississippi basin to cross dry plains and high mountain ranges to the suitable environments on the west coast. But the presence of the barrier on the west coast is due to the importation of this species for propagation work, since it is an edible species. Some frogs of this species are now naturalized in Japan.

Climatic barriers, on the other hand, may be said to be directly related to topographic barriers, in that topography exerts a marked influence on climate. If the mean rainfall, and therefore moisture of a given area varies widely from an adjacent region, the animals who depend on a definite amount of moisture will be found to inhabit one but not the other. Simple examples, these, but they serve to make the point clear.

The influence exerted by the geological fall-line in Georgia is evidently well marked. That is, from the distribution maps that have been so far compiled. There is also a definite climatic belt across the state in this region, and so we have the state divided into two definite faunal areas. There is not, as the foregoing statements seem to imply, a definite sharp line of demarcation between the zones. It is rather a belt showing a very pronounced lateral gradation of plant and animal types. I wish that space would permit of a more detailed account of the barriers of Georgia. But since the matter is before you, you can observe some of them for yourself.

CLAIRE WINDSOR ACCUSES BROKER OF STEALING $11

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Alfred C. Read Jr., has been charged with the theft of $11 by Claire Windsor, blonde actress from whom Read's former wife recently was awarded a $75,000 judgment in an alienation of affections suit.

The former Oakland broker branded the issuance of the complaint the result of a "frame-up."

Miss Windsor denied his accusation, but admitted she left her purse within reach of Read "to see what he would do about it."

The alleged theft was last Saturday night when Read came to Miss Windsor's home, the actress said, at her request and in her effort to obtain affidavits from him which would aid her motion for a retrial of the suit.

COTTON, SEED LINKED IN MARKETING ACCORD

Joint Agreement Is Decided on by Farm Administration.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(AP)—The farm administration decided today to draft a single marketing agreement covering both cotton ginners and cotton seed crushers.

The contract will incorporate acceptable portions of separate agreements submitted by the industries several months ago.

It is likely that manufacturers of cottonseed shortening and cooking oils will also be included in the group agreement.

The plan is to put the agreement into effect on a voluntary basis. It may be necessary to hold a public hearing on the completed measure to comply with legal requirements.

Administration spokesmen explained it had been necessary to rewrite a number of agreements offered by various industries. It was pointed out these industries are so closely related the administration feels a single contract can cover them.

A number of informal conferences with interested persons have been held to consider the proposed group agreements. Others are arranged. The administration's legal division is now working on the contract.

Cotton ginners and cotton seed crushers several months ago submitted their marketing agreements and codes of fair competition. Since then there has been no definite public action on either by the administration.

In view of the new delay brought about by the decision to combine the two, it is not considered likely any cotton ginned this season will come under the new agreement.

U. S. Will Distribute Coal To Help Needy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Plans for distributing thousands of tons of hard and soft coal to the nation's needy during the coming winter were being worked out today by the relief administration.

One suggestion under consideration called for distribution directly from retail dealers. Persons needing and unable to buy coal would obtain orders from local relief agencies.

The retailers, railroads and coal operators would be asked to reduce their charges on relief coal.

That suggestion went out to coal men today, although it has not yet been approved formally by the administration.

Smith Reynolds' Plane To Be Sent To Widow

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Oct. 18.—(AP)—One of the late Smith Reynolds' prized possessions—his cabin airplane—was turned over to a pilot today for delivery to the young tobacco heir's widow, Mrs. Abby Holman Reynolds, who recently bought it.

R. A. Holloway, the pilot, came here today and took charge of the plane. He said it would be flown to Wilmington, Del., to be used by Mrs. Reynolds.

The plane, which had stood in a hangar at Reynolds' airport here since young Reynolds was fatally wounded after a party at the family home in July of last year, had been in custody of the Forsyth county public administrator. The sale was negotiated with him, and confirmed by order of Forsyth county superior court.

F. D. R. Pleased, Not Satisfied With 32 Pct. Farm Price Rise

By MARK ETHRIDGE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Administration circles, continuing today a check-up to ascertain how the recovery program is proceeding, said they were pleased, but not satisfied. President Roosevelt feels that although farm prices have increased 32 per cent, up to September, over the average for the year that ended in March, they are not high enough, and the administration must continue its efforts to raise them.

The increase was not net, because figures furnished the president by an interpreting economist for the economic council showed that while the farmer's yield for what he sold was increasing almost a third, the cost of products he purchased had also increased by 11 per cent. Despite the abatement of the gap by 21 per cent, the farmer's return was listed as far below the pre-war parity.

The president found pleasure also in the report of the economist that factory employment in September as compared with the same month of 1929 recovered two-fifths of the decline. In the same time the income of factory workers had risen by one-fourth and the cost of living had risen by 9 per cent from March to September.

Release of the figures followed by a few hours those of Secretary Perkins showing that more than 620,000 workers returned to jobs in 17 industrial and business groups in September.

Miss Perkins said the figures were representative of industries that normally employed 20,000,000 of the 40,000,000 of gainful workers of the country. She added that measured from the low point of March, 1933, the total September figures showed an estimated gain of 2,700,000 workers in the 17 industrial groups surveyed and an increase of approximately $54,000,000 in weekly wages in September over March.

Another point of gratification to the president was that the treasury offering of a new bond issue of $500,000,000 had been oversubscribed nearly four times, with subscriptions still coming in.

A report by the labor department on wholesale commodity prices during the day showed an increase of nearly 2 per cent during September, with the total increase over a year ago of nearly 8 1/2 per cent.

The department said that a study of 784 commodities based on 1926 as 100, showed an increase from 89.5 in August to 70.5 in September. The rise above 70 for September was the first time it had passed that figure since November, 1931. The figure had risen in a year from 65.3 for September, 1932. The record-low was in February of this year, when the index figure stood at 59.8.

Dr. Frederick C. Howe, consumers' counsel for the farm administration, said profit margins for the baker and the retailer had increased from August 29 to September 26. He added that although the cost of materials going into the typical loaf of bread declined from 2.94 cents to 2.89, the average cost to consumers in 49 cities for which he kept records advanced from 7.6 cents per pound loaf to 7.9 cents.

"THE ROAD IS OPEN AGAIN!"

EARLY in the eighteenth century an English writer penned these lines: "Let me write the ballads of a nation and I care not who may make its laws."

Since time immemorial, the songs of a people have reflected their state of mind, their attitude, their feelings...

What of the songs of today? There is a new lilt, a new feeling of hopefulness, even eagerness to them. Name and spirit of one of the latest songs, "The Road Is Open Again" is typical of confidence restored.

The First National Bank of Atlanta welcomes the opportunity of working with forward-looking citizens who feel that with the "New Deal," "the road is open again" to better business and brighter days.

'GATORS SEEK FIRST VICTORY OVER TARHEELS

Wildcats Face Improved Generals, Who Have Chance To Win.

By the Associated Press.
Unable to more than tie North Carolina in any of their previous meetings, Florida hopes to score its first win over the Tarheels at Gainesville Saturday.

This engagement and Kentucky's go with Washington and Lee at Hooover, Va., are the only Southeastern-Southern Conference conflicts of the week.

The "Gators," under a new young coach, Dutch Stanley, have been impressive in their early contests, beating Stetson and Sewanee and playing North Carolina State to a scoreless tie.

Using a variation of the Notre Dame system, Florida has shown precision in the execution of its maneuvers.

LINE UNCERTAIN.
Florida's backfield can hold its own against almost any opposition it meets this season but the line has yet to prove its mettle in spirited combat.

North Carolina will test the forward wall as well as Florida's defense against aerial bombs.

The "Gators" are one of the three southeastern clubs who have not been scored on this year. Oddly enough, the others—Alabama and Louisiana—have the same record as Florida—two wins and a scoreless tie.

Coach Chuck Collins at Carolina has moved Babe Daniels, a tackle, to center to provide more weight in the middle of the forward and Bill Moore has shifted to end.

GENERALS IMPROVE.
Kentucky handed W. & L. a 53-7 whipping a year ago but the Virginia Generals have come along fast this season and will hold the Wildcats to a smaller score. In fact, some experts wouldn't be surprised at a triumph for the Generals.

Captain A. R. McKee, the new Mississippi State mentor, has fulfilled his promise to State gridiron supporters, when he took charge the said: "We no longer will play just defensive football against our major opponents—Vanderbilt, Tennessee, Alabama and the others. We're out to win and show our attack. We may be outscored but we'll be on the offensive throughout."

And Mississippi State did just that against Tennessee and Alabama. They threatened to score on both teams. They held their opponents to a much lower score than a year ago.

TIGERS HUNGRY FOR GAMECOCKS
COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 18.—(AP) Down from the hills of Oconee came Clemson's football stalwarts today, hungry to give their coach, Jess Neely, his first victory over South Carolina, and in their wake streamed an army of supporters, thirsty for Gamecock blood.

Hotels were filling up, colors were flaunted in a year ago but the Virginia Generals have come along fast this season and will hold the Wildcats to a smaller score. In fact, some experts wouldn't be surprised at a triumph for the Generals.

Tulane's Fumbles Make Tech Scouts Fumble for Words

Mr. William Alexander, the Georgia Tech man, was sitting in his office with a long-bladed knife going whackety-whackety against the soft leather on the side of one of his shoes.

"Excalibur?" said one of the visitors, pointing to the knife and trying to show off what an evening with the five-foot shelf will do for a good, earnest boy trying to get along in the world.

"For my scouts," said the Georgia Tech man, as he went on, whackety-whackety.

"They all have Tulane complexes," he said. "I ask them what about Tulane and they get pale around the gills and tell me how great Tulane is. Maybe Tulane is, but I want to know something else."

"They mention lateral passes. But I find that none of the passes gained much ground. But the scouts say the laterals look great and may gain ground."

"They mention how much ground Tulane would gain if Tulane didn't fumble so much. Maybe Tulane won't fumble against us. Maybe Tulane will gain all the yards left on Grant field. But I want to know something," said the Georgia Tech man.

The scouts kept carefully away from the Georgia Tech office and in scrimmage Wednesday afternoon the Tulane plays were run off against the varsity. The Tech backs did not fumble the football. And the plays looked very good.

Tulane remains something of a mystery. Tech and Georgia scouts who saw them against the Texas Aggies came back saying that the Tulane outfit would have won by two touchdowns if they had not fumbled so much. And the football experts who watched Tulane lose, 26 to 13, to Georgia, say that if Tulane had not fumbled so much Tulane would have won by two touchdowns. And it seems that Tulane would have beaten Maryland more than 20 to 0 if they had not fumbled so much.

In their two important games to date the Tulane backs have all been triple-threat backs—stumble, fumble and fall down. In the Georgia game a Tulane back was running in the clear with the tying touchdown under his arm. He stumbled and fell at the 10-yard line.

There was some suspicion that a north Georgia apple grower had shot him from the stands, but an investigation revealed no hurt except to his feelings.

FUMBLE—TO REACH BLINDLY.
The Tulane backfield is handling the football this year considerably more than they did last season.

A part of the definition of the good word fumble is to reach blindly. And that is what the Wave backs are doing. It is a new backfield set that Ted Cox is sending out this fall. And it simply hasn't learned to handle the football.

They will learn. And I imagine that if they learn this week they will out-touchdown the Georgia Tech eleven. But there is no telling. One of those fumbling epidemics amounts to hysteria. The boys keep expecting it and when it does come they go all to pieces.

Tulane has more speed, more experience and more reserves than Georgia Tech. The Jackets are going along with what was left over from last fall. The sophomores, upon whom definite improvement for 1933 depended, are still a game or so away.

But they cannot fumble and win football games. Because a fumble gives the other guys the football. And when they have it, it is impossible for anyone else to score.

GRANTLAND RICE.
I am quite sorry that I cannot arrange to have all the Grantland Rice fans in Georgia to gather here today to form a Grantland Rice club and meet their hero.

It was just the other night that two gentlemen, heated by argument and something else, called and demanded to know what Grantland Rice said about the World Series of this year as compared with the one which Mathewson pitched in some years ago, "Which," they said, "did he say was the best?"

The gentlemen were informed that Mr. Rice had not publicly made any comparison. Whereupon the gentlemen demanded that he be called at once to settle the argument. "We won't take no other word but his," they said, emphatically.

Grantland Rice began syndicating his ideas and comments on sport more than two decades ago. Today there isn't a cross-road hamlet that doesn't know of Grantland Rice and respect his opinions. His daily column is one of the most valuable features The Constitution has and is widely read. His writings have never lost the original freshness of viewpoint and his style never wearies. It was Rice who first wrote of "The Four Horsemen" in football. It is he who every year makes nationally known phrases and many descriptions of play.

Rice is a native Tennessean, having started work on a Nashville paper after graduating from Vanderbilt University. So great was his influence in Nashville that a managing editor, who is still on the job at Nashville, swears that for three years after Rice left no sports writer was hired who could not begin his work with a poem. Rice is really a splendid poet. Sport really owes a great deal to Rice.

Paul Gallico is another distinguished figure in the sports world. He is a fiction writer of note and his column in the New York Daily News is one of the most widely read in New York. Gallico's writings will be syndicated, within a few months, by the Chicago Tribune Syndicate.

Rice and Gallico will spend today in Atlanta. They arrived by plane last night.

Harp-Cardwell Vol Quarterback
Fight Tonight Joins Casualties

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Deke Brackett, regular Tennessee quarterback, today joined the casualty list which already has put four Vols out of the Alabama game Saturday.

Suffering from a lacerated eye and other injuries received in the Duke game last Saturday, the Vol quarterback was given a two-day rest. If he does not round into condition Freddie Moses, 142-pound quarterback probably will see the call.

The Vols appeared ragged in a short scrimmage this afternoon. The revamped varsity line was unable to check the freshmen long enough for Beattie Feathers to get off his punts with any distance. Rather than take chances of injuring any more players, Coach Neyland scrimmaged his men only a few minutes.

Jack Harp, popular fighter of Warm Springs, will defend his welterweight title of the south tonight against Marshall Cardwell, of Le Grange, in the feature bout of an all-star 34-round boxing card to be staged in the East Point city auditorium.

Cardwell has been working out hard for his fight with Harp and expects to land an early knockout, which means that he will have to step at a fast pace, as Harp is a clever boxer and a terrific puncher. Harp has defeated some of the best-known fighters in this section. One of the best bouts of the season is expected for East Point fans to watch.

The semi-windup between Battling Maddox, veteran local lightweight, and Young Ketchell should prove exciting at all times, as both fighters are bitter rivals. They will also meet in a 10-rounder.

TULANE ATTACK PUZZLES TECH IN SCRIMMAGE

Jackets Find Both Laterals and Running Plays Difficult.

By Jimmy Jones.

The football got an awful tossing around yesterday at the old Rose Bowl as Tulane's multi-lateral offense was paraded by Mack Tharpe's freshmen.

The Jackets found the Tulane laterals, the triple laterals and the forwards most perplexing in practice, just as Tulane's three rivals, the Texas Aggies, Georgia and Maryland, found them in actual combat.

The Tech ends did all the modern dance steps in trying to stop them, starting with a slow waltz and ending up with a lively Charleston when one of the fast freshmen backs broke away for a long run.

SCORE QUICKLY.
The freshmen marched the field three times and scored two touchdowns in rapid succession with Lawrence Hays, masquerading as Bucky Bryan, running riot off the tackles, and Dick Board, doubling for Joe Loftin, running through the line for a score. Ernie Tharpe, kid brother of Bob, the varsity tackle, and Mack, the coach, scored another on a long jaunt around end.

At times the Tech line would bust up the laterals and they didn't look so perplexing, for nothing is so in-spired looking as a lateral that is batted up in its inception. But, on other occasions, Hays was carrying the ball in a Bryan and Tharpe was running with a zest that Preacher Roberts and Louis Thames would not have been ashamed of had they viewed the proceedings.

Naturally the Jackets looked a little bad in the scrimmage, for it was the first look they had had at the Tulane stuff. When it was over, Coach Alexander took them up under the lights at Grant field for a little dummy work on their own plays.

There also was some group work for the linemen and a kicking practice for the varsity, preceding the scrimmage.

FULL OF FOOTBALLS.
That Tulane, despite its propensity to fumble, has well mastered their intricate laterals, there is no doubting. Coaches Ted Cox and Lester Lautenberger have been in constant work on them and they have the speedy backs to execute them. And the air at Grant field Saturday will be full of footballs when the Greenies have the ball. They way these backs catch it around is a sight for the eyes. It looks like a cross between volleyball and basketball, but the attack, behind good blocking, gains a lot of ground.

Tulane also has a very good flat pass and uses it to good advantage, interspersed with Joe Loftin's line bucks, the laterals, the submarines and the off-tackle slants. Their attack is a pretty one to watch.

Chances are that the Greenies will show an improved offense over that of the Georgia game here Saturday, since most of the backs are sophomores and have gained experience in the three games.

Stopping Bucky Bryan, the Shreveport Flyer, is not the only task of the Jackets. He is a lateral, shifty man, and the Jackets must watch him, especially on bringing back the kicks, but there are lots of other good ball carriers. Preacher Roberts, Bob Tharpe, Mintz, Thames, Rodriguez and Menge. The Wave also has a very good kicker in Little Monk Simons, son of the trainer.

WATCH THOSE KICKS.
With Bryan back in the hole to haul back those kicks, Tech must have some good and accurate punting at his own command. Saturday, if the Braves are good as they shown by Phillips and Martin against Auburn, there will be little to worry about on this score. Bobby Dodd has been working fast, fully on the Tech kickers, and they won't give Bryan many chances to take them on the fly.

No injuries resulted from the scrimmage yesterday. There will be an other today, and a final practice Friday. Then the Wave, backed by the usual raincloud of enthusiastic boosters, will roll into Atlanta for the game expected to draw an even larger crowd than the 25,000 which saw the Auburn game.

Tulane Squad In Fine Condition.
NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Tulane's grid warblers, who are in a semi-scrimmage practice today as they perfected offense and defense for Saturday's game with Georgia Tech at Atlanta, are in the best condition it has been in this year.

STREET PILOTS MISSION.
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—(UP)—Charles E. (Gabby) Street, who managed the St. Louis Cardinals when he won the world's championship in 1931, was named tonight as manager of the Mission club of the Pacific Coast league.

Street has accepted terms for a one-year contract. President Joseph Bearwald, of the Missions, announced. He would not disclose Street's salary, but it was reported to be around $8,000.

G. M. A. in Hard Drill For Boys' High Game
By Roy White.

With all the odds heavily against them, members of the G. M. A. football squad put in a double time Wednesday in preparation for the annual game with Boys' High Friday night at Ponce de Leon park.

The scrimmage Wednesday afternoon was followed by more than an hour of blackboard drill in which the Boys' High plays, particularly the forward pass, were thoroughly discussed. The Cadets were not so impressive in the afternoon workout and will be given a long dummy drill this afternoon.

Meanwhile Boys' High coaches were striving to drive out overconfidence from the team.

Last year, Boys' High was rated heavily, but a 7-to-0 victory was registered.

In fact for the past four years, both teams combined have scored but four touchdowns. In 1929 they played to a scoreless tie; Boys' High won, 7 to 6 in 1930 G. M. A. beat the Purples, 6 to 0 in 1931 and last year, another one-touchdown game was recorded for Boys' High.

The underdog in each of the past four contests have fought with every defensive weapon possible and the 1933 G. M. A. team is looking forward to holding the fast-improving Boys' High offensive.

While the two bitter rivals are preparing for another round of the city championship, Tech High is working to perfect a defense that will stop the well-known Lanier High aerial attack Saturday night at Ponce de Leon park.

Coach Selby Buck always turns up with one of the best passers in prep circles and the 1933 Lanier team is no exception. Buck denies that he has a capable passer this year, but Tech High is taking no chances and is preparing for the attack.

Lanier High always gives the spectators plenty of action. Time-worn plays are used in desperation and when all others have failed and the last quarter in any Lanier game is costly to the nervous system.

Look, He's Holding the Ball!

Here is Little Monk Simons, another Tulane backfield threat who hopes to get loose against Georgia Tech Saturday at Grant field. The Tulane backs have been afflicted with that dread gridiron malady "fumblyitis" in three games to date, namely, Texas Aggies, Georgia and Maryland, and they are liable to go places if they can hold the ball.

TULANE SEEKS TO END FUMBLES

By Horace Renegar.

(Special to Constitution.)
NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 18.—Tulane's Green Wave has been noted for the past five years as a fumbling team, but Coach Ted Cox is determined to break this jinx against the Golden Tornado of Georgia Tech.

When the Greenies were riding the crest to championships or title claims in 1929, 1930 and 1931, the backs were fumbling frequently. In 1932, the Wave kept up the record.

The Maryland game fumble record approached that of the Wave-South Carolina game last year when the Greenies fumbled line after line when the Irish team took to the field.

But there is only one coach who ever resorted to song when his team had lost four straight games and was in the act of being taken for the fifth. Harry Robertson, whose Oglethorpe team plays Stetson tonight at Ponce de Leon park, was the coach.

Robertson tells the story on himself.

"We had lost four straight games. I was frankly up against it. I didn't know what to do. And so I went over to Georgia Tech to see my old friend, Coach William Alexander. I thought he might have some advice for me."

"Well, I went to see Alex and he asked me why I didn't sing to the boys between halves. (Robertson has a grand tenor voice, the rascel)."

TRIES EVERYTHING.
"Since I had tried everything else I decided that it wouldn't do any harm. The next game came along."

"At half time we were trailing, 13 to 0. In the quiet of the dressing room I told the boys I was going to sing them a school song."

"Fight for Dear Old Oglethorpe and Win This Game" . . . and then I sent them back on the field."

"For about five minutes the melody lingered on. The team was battling like it never had battled before. But the remainder of the game was sad to relate."

"We lost, 40 to 0."

Harry Robertson, the singing coach. Since this experience Robertson has confined his vocal efforts to the show-off. Which, perhaps, explains the melodious notes which float out on the crisp air of uptown Peachtree, most any morning.

Robertson's Singing Fails To Arouse Team

Oglethorpe Coach Attempted New Appeal To Inspire Losing Club.

By Jack Troy.

There have been many stories of dressing-room scenes between the halves of big games, with the coaches resorting to all forms of melodramatic appeal.

There was Clark Shaughnessy, who used to read poetry to his Loyola (New Orleans) team. And Bob Zuppke, who one year at Illinois had a team of Swedes. Illinois was playing Chicago, which happened to have a team largely composed of Irishmen. "Five Yards" McCarthy was the star.

"A team of Swedes ran through the weeds with McCarthy fast behind them," Zuppke told an Illinois team that was being taken for the fifth.

Mac McGuffin often resorts to civil war talk when his Vanderbilt team is lagging in a game with a northern eleven. He reminds them of the charge at Gettysburg.

ROCKNE'S APPEARANCE.
The late Knute Rockne was a past master of appeal. He left a sick bed and was wheeled out on the field in the bitter cold of a game day and his mere presence transformed the Irish team into a team of fighting men.

But there is only one coach who ever resorted to song when his team had lost four straight games and was in the act of being taken for the fifth. Harry Robertson, whose Oglethorpe team plays Stetson tonight at Ponce de Leon park, was the coach.

Robertson tells the story on himself.

"We had lost four straight games. I was frankly up against it. I didn't know what to do. And so I went over to Georgia Tech to see my old friend, Coach William Alexander. I thought he might have some advice for me."

"Well, I went to see Alex and he asked me why I didn't sing to the boys between halves. (Robertson has a grand tenor voice, the rascel)."

TARHEEL THREAT.
GAINESVILLE, Fla., Oct. 18.—(AP)—North Carolina passes were used by the University of Florida "B" squad today for telling gains on the variety, and observers drew the conclusion that the Tarheels should present a distinct threat Saturday, especially in the aerial department.

SEVERAL STARS TO SEE GAME FROM SIDELINES

Darracott Okay for Tackle Post; McNeely Is Shifted to Center.

By Jack Troy.

Considering the injuries and all that sort of thing, Oglethorpe nevertheless will enter tonight's game with the Mad Hatters of Stetson University at Ponce de Leon park slight favorites to win.

Coach Harry Robertson, of Oglethorpe, has a right to sing the blues, but he isn't inclined to do so regardless of the fact that several regulars will watch the game from the sidelines.

Oglethorpe's biggest handicap will be the loss of Rudy Shouse at center. Shouse has a broken hand as a souvenir of the Chattanooga game last Saturday.

McNEELY AT CENTER.
A last-minute shift has sent McNeely, a sophomore, from guard to center. McNeely was originally a center and was shifted to play a guard weakness. Julian Herriott will fill in at McNeely's guard position.

Darracott's shoulder injury was not as bad as thought and he will start at tackle. The remainder of the line is intact, with Chandler at a guard, Robinson at a tackle, and the two sophomores, Freeman and Pickard, at ends.

The starting backfield will include Eddie Anderson at quarterback; Sam Leslie and Harry Wren at the wing backs, and Metrick at fullback.

Hoyle Harrison, injured in the Chattanooga game, will not play because of two injured ribs. Examination revealed that cartilage was torn loose from the ribs.

STARS OUT.
Wade, star sophomore quarterback, probably won't get to play because of a troublesome knee injury. And Jack Harrison, who has been out since the Newberry game, has a broken ankle bone, it was revealed yesterday. Harrison is one of the best backs and will not be available for several weeks.

Atlanta fans will see one of the most versatile offensive attacks being exhibited in the south this year when the Petrela swing into action from their military-like huddle. Double spinners, double passes, double reverses, hidden ball plays, lateral and forward passes are all a part of the Petrela repertoire.

Stetson last week defeated Middle Georgia College handsily. The Mad Hatters, from Deland, Fla., lost their opening game to the University of Florida.

Coach Herbert McQuillan and the Stetson squad arrived last night.

LIGHT BUT FAST.
The visiting Hatters, light but fast, are expected to give Oglethorpe a close battle. Florida only beat the eleven by a four-touchdown margin.

Both teams use the double wing back. This formation makes for spectacular offensive play. There should be plenty of the spectacular under the lights tonight.

The kickoff is at 7:30.

Alabama Watches Tennessee Plays

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Oct. 18.—(AP) Under the careful supervision of coaches who watched to see that no rough work was permitted, Alabama's Crimson Tide today looked over Tennessee formations as depicted by orange-shirted freshmen.

Tom Hupke, a line mainstay, watched proceedings from the sidelines as did several other varsity members, whose names are inscribed on the list of injured.

Frank Moseley, shifted from quarterback to fullback, was again at quarter and Buck Hughes was put at fullback. For Leach, captain and end, has recovered from injuries.

Tech Frosh Play Auburn Nov. 17

Georgia Tech's freshman football season will open its season against the Auburn freshmen at Auburn on Friday, November 17, it has been announced.

The Baby Jackets play only one other game beside this, meeting the Georgia freshmen in their Shrine benefit game here on Thanksgiving Day.

Friendly Counsel BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name and address will be kept confidential. Care The Atlanta Constitution.

My Dear Miss Chatfield: I have been married nine years and have four lovely children. I have come to the conclusion that my marriage is a failure because my husband is bored with me. He has a friend whom he much prefers to spend his leisure hours with and when, as a matter of convenience, he is unable to do so, he comes to me here and together they shut me out of the conversation, as if I had no interest in it, or nothing to contribute.

It is a bitter humiliation to have to acknowledge that you are a bore to your own husband. I am constantly afraid that the children will detect my attitude toward him. I am not a bad looking woman and although I am almost 30 years old I look much younger. I keep myself well groomed and well dressed and he could not be ashamed of the way I look. Now, days, he never takes me out but goes with his friend instead. If you can make any suggestion as to how I may pique his interest I shall count it a favor.

Answer: Men can be so selfish it makes me shudder to think about it. It doesn't do any good to appeal to them on that ground. One must put up with them as they are. If a woman doesn't know how to do that she must stay out in the cold and shiver while he warms himself by the fire of the state of affairs. Nine years in the treadmill will make any woman dizzy, if she gets no outside diversion. I recall seeking the blindfolded donkey drawing water to irrigate the bar artichokes outside Naples. Hour after hour he went around and around the well. If he hadn't been blindfolded he couldn't have kept it up indefinitely. The wife and mother in the home goes around and around day after day and she is not blindfolded.

It doesn't do any good to anathematize the men. It doesn't help matters to tell them they are selfish. The only thing that will help is to acknowledge that they are the best we've got and we can't live happily without them, so we will do all we can to please them.

A woman who feels that she is a bore to her husband is in danger of getting harked about it and when she does she is a worse bore. Find out what topics interest the husband and his friend. Read on them. Acquaint yourself with the problems they propose. Keep quiet until you have a contribution to make and be sure if it is worth while they will accept it.

Invite the friend in for meals. Don't let your husband think you are jealous of him. Try a game of cards with a fourth party from the outside. Keep up your appearance so your husband will be proud of you. Go off for a trip occasionally. Let him see what a hole your absence makes. Let him have a try at managing the four children without you. He will be glad to get you back home.

Naturally your pride is wounded. All of these efforts will be a salve to your hurt pride. More than likely you are now in a sort of perennial sulk, which is never attractive. Certainly, you show your resentment of the interfering friend. The cunning thing to do is to take him in and make him feel that you accept him because he is dear to your husband.

While we are paying our respects to our idols—the men—we might say a word about ourselves. We are too prone to narrow our interests down to our homes. The men necessarily have versatile interests. A man's business or profession is a ready-made one. He manages to have others, which he cultivates. It is up to us to do the same. If there is no money to employ a servant to stay with the children, trade with a neighbor. Tell her you will keep her children once a week if she will keep yours once a week. Get out and see something of life about you. Take in a movie, go to a show, hear some good music, join a book club, get together with some friends who are discussing some other topics outside home interests. You have housekeeping, child-raising, servant problems enough at home without introducing these subjects into the conversations with friends.

The clubs run by women for women are doing a big service and there is always room for one more. Music and literature, art of many kinds, are fostered by them. Garden clubs and little theater movements furnish interesting outlets for men and women. The day has passed when it suffices for a woman to be known as a wife and mother alone. She can't be efficient in her home unless she arranges to blow it out with a fresh breeze from the outside.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Afternoon Ceremony in Covington Unites Miss Turner and Mr. Fowler

COVINGTON, Ga., Oct. 18.—Characterized by beauty and dignity was the afternoon ceremony Wednesday at which Miss Louly Turner became the bride of Robert Raphael Fowler Jr. at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Nathaniel Sneed Turner, in Covington. Rev. Walker Combs, pastor of the Covington Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a representative gathering of relatives and friends of the couple, who assembled from over Georgia and other sections of the south.

Smilax entwined the rail of the staircase which members of the bridal party descended to the lower hall and in the spacious dining room an improvised altar was erected at the end of the room. Before the altar a circular dais was raised on which members of the wedding party assembled. Behind the altar a screen of silver metal cloth was veiled by graceful sprays of smilax cascading from the ceiling to the floor and covering the silver cloth with a delicate tracery of greenery.

Six seven-branched candelabras were placed at the back of the dais, graduating in height with the lowest at the outside and the tallest in the middle. The candelabras were of white chrysanthemums and asparagus fern. Two Grecian urns were placed at the foot of the steps to the platform and held artistically arranged white chrysanthemums. White chrysanthemums were arranged in vases featuring the decoration throughout the house.

Following the ceremony Mrs. George Elrod sang "All for You," and Mrs. B. F. Callaway sang "Calm as the Night," by John. Miss Fletcher Lou Lunsford sang "Morning," by Grieg, and was in charge of the wedding music played during the ceremony. The wedding march, from "Lohengrin" was played, and the recessional by Mendelssohn was used.

Bridal Party. Mrs. Robert Arnold acted as her sister's matron of honor and Mrs. N. S. Turner Jr. was first bridesmaid. They were gowns exactly alike, fashioned of golden-hued velvet featuring bateau necklines and long-fitted sleeves. Interesting features were the strips of velvet which were employed from the straight neckline to the back to the waist leaving open slits between. The gowns were closely fitted with belts of the same material marking the waistline and the back skirts reaching the floor in the front and extending in short trains in the back. They carried bouquets of tall-man roses and yellow snapdragons tied with bronze satin ribbon.

The bridesmaids, Misses Julia Muse, Louise Fowler and Mary Tripp, of Covington; Sara Edwards, of Conover; Elizabeth Thompson, of LaGrange; Elizabeth Thompson, of Atlanta; Anna Tidwell, of Moultrie, and Mrs. John Bell, of Monroe, wore gowns of the green velvet cut on similar lines to those worn by Mrs. Arnold and Mrs. Turner, except that they had puffed sleeves with attractive designs traced on the velvet of the sleeves. They carried bouquets of yellow snapdragons.

Miss Howard Weds James B. Thomas.

LExINGTON, Ga., Oct. 18.—Miss Hattie Irwin Howard became the bride of James Bowen Thomas, of Atlanta, formerly of Greensboro, at a quiet ceremony solemnized Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Howard.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Gussie Reese sang "At Dawning," accompanied by Miss Emily Bacon, who rendered "Traumeri," during the ceremony. The bride's pastor, Rev. W. M. Cole, read the marriage service in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends.

The bride was becomingly gowned in brown triple crepe combined with chiffon velvet of the same shade. Her accessories were of brown and her flowers were a shoulder bouquet of pink rose buds.

Mrs. Thomas is the youngest daughter of her parents and a popular member of the social circle here. Mr. Thomas is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Thomas, of Greensboro. He is engaged in the motor transfer business in Atlanta and his bride will make their home at 1500 Mozley drive.

Parties Planned For Miss Sharp.

Among the interesting parties planned in compliment to Miss Ludyne Sharp, popular debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sharp, is the third Sneed Turner, mother of the bride, entertained the wedding guests at a reception, Mrs. Turner was handsomely gowned in ecru, uncut velvet, with a train of white tulle. Her costume was a shoulder spray of deep purple orchids. Mrs. R. R. Fowler, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of black velvet with purple orchids added notes of color.

Assisting in receiving the guests in addition to the bride's mother were Mesdames Tom Swann, Ernest Callaway, Moody Summers, Hartford Pennington, Ernest Lee Stevenson, Misses Dorothy Piper, Eleanor Piper, and Sarah Clyde Hutchins.

On their return from a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Fowler will reside in Covington where Mr. Fowler is connected in business.

By JOHN L. COOLEY
NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—An advance in wheat prices insufficient to keep stocks from sliding today and prices in Wall Street's leading market again trended downward rather sharply.

Activity was moderate, though the pace quickened a bit toward the close after a desultory reaction following an irregular opening. Net advances were in a 1 to 5-point range, with rails and steel particularly so. The most interesting feature of the day was the industrial average, which advanced 1 1/2 points, or 15 points in absolute value, to 100.00.

Steel shares took little comfort from word that production had tumbled 5 points to a nationwide average of 39 per cent of capacity. United States Steel, the leader, slipped nearly 6 points, while the common was off 7 1/2. Bethlehem's senior issue was off 7 1/2, the junior 2 3/4. National Steel lost about 4.

New York Central, breaking 30, closed with a loss of more than 3 points. American Can, Western Union, American Alkali, Firestone, Commercial Union, and United States Steel, all declined. American Alkali, Firestone, Commercial Union, and United States Steel, all declined.

U. S. Treasury issue
Is Oversubscribed
WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt announced today that the treasury's offer of $500,000,000 in a new bond issue had been oversubscribed four times, with subscriptions still pouring in by mail.

With books closed on the cash issue last night, the oversubscription amounted to nearly $2,000,000,000. The bonds mature in 12 years and are callable in ten.

They bear interest at 4 1/4 per cent the first year and 3 1/4 thereafter. The cash issue was in connection with an offer to exchange industrial bonds for four-year Treasury bonds, approximately one-third of which were called.

A gratifying response to the exchange offer also was reported.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—The curb market sold off today in quiet trading. Liquidation was not heavy, but rather represented a persistent flow of the offerings. Closing losses ranged from fractions to around 2 points.

Metals, alcohol, utilities and oils reacted, while a number of wide issues were recorded by various specialties. Aluminum, a small issue, reacted, while a number of wide issues were recorded by various specialties.

Public utility shares found little encouragement in the news of power production figures, and losses around 1 point were suffered by Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric.

Issues sagging 1 to 2 points or more included Glen Alden Coal, Gulf and Humboldt, Hiram Walker, National Distillers, New York Zinc, Newmont and Pan American.

Transfers were 219,000 shares compared with $24,000 for the previous session.

G. M. C. FOREIGN SALES
SHOW BIG INCREASE
NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—An abrupt rise in General Motors Corporation's overseas sales last month was seen by some Wall Street analysts as a possible indication that the depression in the automobile market has begun to ease.

The company's sales in overseas markets in September, as reported in a recent report, showed a jump of 96 per cent over the same month of last year, 40 per cent over the same month of 1930, and 25 per cent over the same month of 1929.

Another indication of increased exports of American goods was a gain of approximately 100,000 tons in the month of September, according to a report from the U. S. Customs Bureau.

The decline in the value of the dollar of more than 30 per cent since last April has in effect reduced the amount in American goods which can be purchased with foreign currencies.

From the year's loss of $64,300,000 in foreign sales, American exports of goods in September rose to $87,000,000, or a gain of $22,700,000.

AD-WRITING CONTEST

21 PRIZES EACH WEEK

RULES OF CONTEST

Any person except employees of The Constitution and their families, or any person who is or has been employed in the advertising business is eligible to enter this contest.

All ads must be entered at 137 Peachtree Arcade before 5 p. m. Wednesday of each week.

Winners' names and the first three winning ads will be published the following Sunday.

All entries must be submitted on official "Ad-Writing" paper, which may be obtained at any of the stores co-operating in this contest.

All advertisements must be entered on Wednesday of each week.

Prizes will be awarded to those contestants, who, in the opinion of the judges, "submit the best ad."

By "Best" is Meant: Its Power to Attract Attention—Arouse Interest—Create Desire—Cause Action.

Any contestant may submit as many ads as he or she wishes. (Example).

One or more ads for every firm or two or more for any or all firms.

At headquarters there will be an experienced ad-man to consult with contestants and give any information desired. All entries become the property of The Constitution and no entries will be returned.

Be sure your name and address is plainly written on the back of your ad.

SUGGESTIONS.

1. Be sure you have your official paper.
2. Imagine yourself as being the manager of the store for which you are writing.
3. Get information from the stores as to how long in business, lines of goods in stock, price ranges, names of materials, etc.
4. Try and avoid poetry.
5. Do not use superlatives or comparative prices.
